BATAVIA, OH -- Turning 18 before the next election? Recently moved? Decided to have a say in how your government is run? Then register to VOTE today at your local Clermont County Public Library (CCPL).

The League of Women Voters (LWV) of Clermont County will partner with CCPL to sponsor a voter registration drive, which will run Tuesday, January 22 through Saturday, February 2, 2008, during the library's regular operating hours*.

Roughly 64% of Americans voted in the 2004 presidential election (U.S. Census Bureau report). The remaining 36% had no voice concerning their rights or how their government is run. Don't be one of them! Register to vote and be heard!

For more information about the voter registration drive, call your local branch or visit www.clermontlibrary.org. You can also learn more about the LWV at <http://www.lwvclermont.com>.

The League of Women Voters of Clermont County is a non-partisan political organization that encourages the informed and active participation of citizens in government and influences public policy through education and advocacy.
